1 I. INTRODUCTION¹

2 Plaintiff Marielita Palacios tries to allege that Wolverine’s collection of her IP
3 address—data she voluntarily provided to the Website and any other public website that 4 she’s accessed on the Internet—violates the California Penal Code’s prohibition on using 5 a “pen register” or “trap and trace device.” Cal. Penal Code § 638.51(a). But under 6 Plaintiff’s interpretation of the statute, every website would violate the California Invasion
7 of Privacy Act, an absurdity that the California State Legislature could not have intended.
8 “[S]tandard computer operations require recording IP addresses so parties can 9 communicate with one another over the Internet.” Mot. at 11-14 (quoting Capitol Recs.
10 Inc. v. Thomas-Rasset, No. CIV-06-1497(MJD/RLE), 2009 WL 1664468, at *3 (D. Minn.
11 June 11, 2009) (emphasis added)). Plaintiff’s boundless application of Section 638.51
12 defies commonsense and the plain meaning of the statute. Her claims should be dismissed 13 and leave to amend denied.

14 Plaintiff’s Opposition also confirms that she can show no facts supporting personal 15 jurisdiction over Wolverine here. She appears to argue the Website’s online sales in 16 California to customers other than herself satisfies her jurisdictional burden. This is not 17 the law. The only connection between Plaintiff’s claims and Wolverine’s Website is her
18 own unilateral decision to use the Website, which is not targeted to California but available 19 nationwide. As Herbal Brands, Inc. v. Photoplaza, Inc. recognized, the “operation of an 20 interactive website does not, by itself, establish express aiming,” and Plaintiff wholly fails
21 to show the “something more” required to support personal jurisdiction here. 72 F.4th
22 1085, 1091 (9th Cir. 2023). Likewise, Plaintiff has “failed to show any connection between 23 [Wolverine’s] forum-related contacts and the harm she suffered.” Daghaly v.
24 Bloomington.com, LLC, No. 23-CV-129-L-WVG, 2023 WL 6538382, at *3 (S.D. Cal.
25 Oct. 6, 2023). Her meritless claims do not belong in this Court.

26 If the Court reaches the merits, Plaintiff’s claims are also fatally deficient.

27 _____
28 ¹ Defined terms are defined in Wolverine’s Motion to Dismiss the First Amended Complaint (“Mot.”) (ECF No. 13).

1 First, as recognized in this District, “the collection of incoming IP addresses”—the 2 conduct Plaintiff complains of here—“by [websites like Wolverine’s] is exempt from this
 3 prohibition” on pen registers and trap and trace devices because public-facing websites
 4 “necessarily capture such data in their RAM [] to operate the website.” Columbia Pictures
 5 Indus. v. Bunnell, No. CV-06-1093FMCJCX, 2007 WL 2080419, at *11 (C.D. Cal. May 6 29, 2007) (emphasis added).

7 Second, CIPA’s text and legislative history confirm that Section 638.51 was never 8 intended to apply to the alleged software’s collection of Website visitors’ IP addresses.
 9 CIPA’s statutory framework also makes clear that the devices prohibited under Section 10 638.51 are those capable of being “attached” to a “telephone line,” not software allegedly 11 embedded on a website to collect IP addresses. Cal. Penal Code § 638.52(c), (d)(1)-(3).

12 Finally, Plaintiff’s “failure to oppose” Wolverine’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s 13 request for punitive damages (FAC ¶¶ 12, 51 & Prayer) “should be deemed a waiver of 14 opposition to the granting of the motion.” Tucker v. Calvin, No. CIV-S-09-0087-GGH-P, 15 2009 WL 3756639, at *1 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2009).

16 II. THE COURT LACKS PERSONAL JURISDICTION OVER WOLVERINE

17 A. Registering To Do Business In California Cannot Confer General Jurisdiction

18 Plaintiff asserts that by registering to do business in California, Wolverine has 19 consented to personal jurisdiction, citing Mallory v. Norfolk S. Ry. Co., 143 S. Ct. 2028
 20 (2023). Opp. at 9:6–10:19. Mallory’s interpretation of a Pennsylvania-specific statute is 21 not the law of California applicable here. “Mallory [] is not relevant to courts in California,
 22 because ‘California does not require corporations to consent to general personal 23 jurisdiction in that state when they designate an agent for service of process or register to 24 do business.’” Rosenwald v. Kimberly Clark Corp., No. 3:22-CV-04993-LB, 2023 WL
 25 5211625, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2023) (quoting AM Tr. v. UBS AG, 681 F. App’x 587, 26 588-89 (9th Cir. 2017) (“California does not require corporations to consent to general
 27 personal jurisdiction in that state” when they “register to do business.”)). General personal 28 jurisdiction over Wolverine is clearly lacking here.

B. “Something More” Required To Show Establish Express Aiming Is Absent Here.

Plaintiff fails to meet her burden to show that Wolverine purposefully directed its conduct to California. Courts in this District have expressly rejected Plaintiff’s argument that “the degree of interactivity of the [onlineshoes.com] website, and the fact that the website functions as an online store, is sufficient to establish express aiming at California.” Martin v. Outdoor Network LLC, No. 2:23-CV-09807-AB-AJR, 2024 WL 661173, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 31, 2024). This Court should also “disagree[.]” Id.

Like the plaintiff in Martin, “Plaintiff relies heavily on Herbal Brands, where the Court held that ‘if a defendant, in its regular course of business, sells a physical product via an interactive website and causes that product to be delivered to the forum, the defendant expressly aimed its conduct at that forum.’ [] But the Court in Herbal Brands specifically ‘reiterate[s] [that] our holding answers only the narrow question whether a defendant’s sale of a physical product to a consumer in the forum state via an interactive website constitutes conduct expressly aimed at a forum.” Martin, 2024 WL 661173, at *4 (quoting Herbal Brands, 72 F. 4th at 1093). If “other internet activity is allegedly the source of personal jurisdiction”—like the collection of Plaintiff’s IP address upon visiting the Website, as alleged here—“cases such as Mavrix, AMA, and Will Co. would continue to apply.” Herbal Brands, 72 F.4th at 1095. Precedent could not be more clear: “[Herbal Brands] ‘does not extend to the extraction of consumer data’ that forms the basis of privacy-related claims.” Kauffman v. Home Depot, Inc., No. 23-CV-0259-AGS-AHG, 2024 WL 221434, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 19, 2024) (quoting Briskin v. Shopify, Inc., 87 F.4th 404, 422 (9th Cir. 2023)).

“In Herbal Brands, the sale and shipment of products to the forum state was the ‘something more’ necessary to establish express aiming in part because the sale and shipment of the products gave rise to the harm caused by the trademark infringement claims therein.” Martin, 2024 WL 661173, at *4 (emphasis added). Here, by contrast, Plaintiff’s claims “do not involve Plaintiff making any purchase on the website”; they are based solely on Plaintiff’s voluntary decision to “test” the Website. Id.

The Opposition’s grab-bag assortment of Wolverine’s other alleged contacts with California cannot establish “something more” here. “Taking Mavrix, AMA, and Will Co. together,” the Ninth Circuit observed, “[w]hat is needed [] is some prioritization of the forum state, some differentiation of the forum state from other locations, or some focused dedication to the forum state which permits the conclusion that the defendant’s suit-related conduct ‘create[s] a substantial connection’ with the forum. [] And that ‘substantial connection’ must be something substantial beyond the baseline connection that the defendant’s internet presence already creates with every jurisdiction through its universally accessible platform.” Briskin, 87 F.4th at 420 (quotation marks and citations omitted) (emphasis added). Beyond its mere baseline “internet presence” in the forum, Wolverine’s alleged California activity identified in the Opposition is neither “substantial” nor “suit-related”:

- Distribution center. Like the “California fulfillment center” in Briskin, Wolverine’s California distribution center (Opp. at 5:8-18) is not “relevant to the specific jurisdiction analysis” here because Plaintiff’s claims related to “data-extraction” do not arise from Wolverine’s de minimis physical presence in the state. 87 F. 4th at 413; see Kauffman, 2024 WL 221434, at *2 (rejecting reliance on Home Depot’s “numerous retail stores in California” for personal jurisdiction because Plaintiff’s alleged harm (extraction of website-browsing data) was unrelated to any online purchase);
- California disclosures; California “disclaimer.” As courts have held, “statements in [Wolverine’s] privacy policy” and Website disclosures “related to California law” do not amount “to the directly targeted conduct sufficient to establish jurisdiction” over Wolverine. Massie v. Gen. Motors Co., No. 1:20-CV-01560-JLT, 2021 WL 2142728, at *7 (E.D. Cal. May 26, 2021); see Voodoo SAS v. SayGames LLC, 2020 WL 3791657, at *5 (N.D. Cal. July 7, 2020) (California-specific privacy policy did not establish that defendant targeted California consumers). Similarly, whether the Website disclaimed sales to California is irrelevant because Plaintiff’s claims do not arise from any online sales in the state;
- Business registration. As discussed, supra § II(A), Wolverine’s “business registration” is neither evidence of jurisdiction over Wolverine in California or “suit-related” conduct. Briskin, 87 F. 4th at 413. Plaintiff’s claims plainly do not arise out of the registration Wolverine has obtained with the California Secretary of State, but her own decision to “test” the Website, without making a purchase.

Plaintiff’s authorities attempting to argue that these contacts show personal jurisdiction are unavailing. Opp. at 5:19–6:27. Unlike Quigley v. Guvera IP Pty. Ltd., 2010 WL 5300867 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2010), this is not a trademark infringement case where defendants were on notice that sales to others within the forum could cause plaintiff harm. Doe v. WebGroup Czech Republic, A.S., 2024 WL 609500 (9th Cir. Feb. 14, 2024) and Ayla, LLC v. Alya Skin Pty. Ltd., 11 F.4th 972 (9th Cir. 2021) found personal jurisdiction over foreign entities under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k)(2), which is not the jurisdictional analysis here but rather focuses on a defendant’s contacts with the U.S. as a whole. Besides the inapposite facts in Doe and Ayla (human trafficking by pornographic websites), express aiming was found because defendants there prioritized the U.S. market. Here, by contrast, no case law finds that Wolverine’s distribution center, Website disclosures, or Secretary or State registration evidence express aiming into California.

Indeed, Plaintiff almost entirely fails to address Wolverine’s authorities showing that express aiming is absent. Mot. at 6:1–11:6. And the selective few authorities that she addresses she does not and cannot meaningful distinguish. Like in AMA Multimedia, LLC v. Wanat, 970 F.3d 1201 (9th Cir. 2020), Plaintiff has failed to show any “differential targeting” towards California, because the Website is available nationwide. Plaintiff’s argument that the website in Massie lacked the “interactive features” present here misses the point—interactivity is not enough under controlling law. Massie, 2021 WL 2142728, at *4. Under Herbal Brands and Briskin, a website’s interactivity is merely a “factor” that cannot establish express aiming without “something more,” which is wholly absent here. Martin, 2024 WL 661173. The Website “is the sole jurisdictional contact with Plaintiff’s claims[.]” Martin, 2024 WL 661173, at *5. That Wolverine “might have sold and shipped goods to other California residents is not relevant to whether the Court has specific jurisdiction” over Wolverine here. Id. (emphasis added).

C. Plaintiff’s Claims Are Not Related To Wolverine’s California Activity

The Ninth Circuit requires Plaintiff to show that a “direct nexus exists between [Wolverine’s] contacts with [California] and the cause of action” or a “strong, direct

1 connection between [Wolverine’s] forum-related activities and the plaintiff’s claims.”
 2 Briskin, 87 F.4th at 413-14 (quotation marks and citations omitted). Plaintiff does neither.

3 Plaintiff alleges only that she accessed Wolverine’s Website, which is accessible
 4 across the U.S. and the globe. FAC ¶ 18. Plaintiff made no purchases. Opp. at 12:18; Cabrera
 5 Decl. ¶ 8. The only connection between her claim and Wolverine’s California-related 6 activities is Plaintiff’s decision to access the Website while in California. Opp. at 12:8-17.
 7 These facts cannot show relatedness. Plaintiff’s “injuries [are] entirely personal to [her] and 8 would follow [her] wherever [s]he might choose to live[.]” Briskin, 87 F. 4th at 416 9 (quotation marks and citation omitted)). Plaintiff’s reliance on Ford Motor Co. v. Mont.
 10 Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct., 141 S. Ct. 1017 (2021) is misplaced—“in Ford, the Supreme Court 11 stated that its holding, which involved physical purchases of cars, did not bear on the 12 ‘doctrinal questions’ associated with personal jurisdiction in the online context.” Massie, 13 2021 WL 2142728, at *6 (citing Ford, 141 S. Ct. at 1028 n.4 (“[W]e do not here consider 14 internet transactions, which may raise doctrinal questions of their own.”)). Wolverine’s 15 “operation of broadly accessible websites does not constitute the type of minimum contacts 16 with the forum needed for specific personal jurisdiction.” Massie, 2021 WL 2142728, at *6.
 17 On this basis alone, the Court should find personal jurisdiction lacking here.

18 D. Jurisdictional Discovery Is Futile

19 “[A] refusal to grant discovery” is appropriate “when ‘it is clear that further 20 discovery would not demonstrate facts sufficient to constitute a basis for jurisdiction.’”
 21 Midcap Funding XVIII Tr. v. CSC Logic, Inc., No. 2:20-cv-09648(CAS/RAOx), 2021 WL
 22 949601, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2021) (quoting Laub v. United States Dep’t of Interior, 23 342 F.3d 1080, 1093 (9th Cir. 2003)). Here, the only discovery Plaintiff purports to desire 24 would not show personal jurisdiction over Wolverine.

25 The discovery that Plaintiff proposes “concerns the extent of Defendant’s control
 26 over the distribution of its products and the volume of its sales in California. But these facts 27 would not be relevant to personal jurisdiction,” because Plaintiff made no purchase.
 28 Martin, 2024 WL 661173, at *5. As courts have held, “whether defendant has California customers other than plaintiff is irrelevant to the Court's specific jurisdiction analysis because contacts with other California customers cannot support the required 'but for' nexus to plaintiff's claims." CSC Logic, Inc., 2021 WL 949601, at *8; see Kauffman, 2024 WL 221434, at *3 ("Kauffman has not carried his burden to show that any claim 'arises out of or relates to' defendant's forum-related activities. And this problem cannot be cured in discovery."). Plaintiff has not and cannot show that jurisdictional discovery is appropriate here.

III. PLAINTIFF HAS NOT STATED A PLAUSIBLE CLAIM

A. Section 638.51 Does Not Apply To Wolverine's Collection Of IP Addresses

As Wolverine showed with ample case law in its Motion (Mot. at 11:16–14:18), if Section 638.51 applied to a the collection of IP addresses by the direct recipient of an online communication (like Wolverine), "then the Internet could not function because standard computer operations require recording IP addresses so parties can communicate with one another over the Internet." Capitol Records, 2009 WL 1664468, at *3 (emphasis added). Here, like in Capitol Records and Malibu Media, Plaintiff's "IP address was voluntarily sent" and automatically logged by Wolverine when Plaintiff accessed the Website. Malibu Media, LLC v. Pontello, No. 13-12197, 2013 WL 12180709, at *4 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 19, 2013). Indeed, since websites like Wolverine's "necessarily capture such data in their RAM[] to operate the website," "the collection of incoming IP addresses by [Wolverine] is exempt from" Section 638.51. Bunnell, 2007 WL 2080419, at *11 (emphasis added).

Plaintiff provides no reason to reject this established, commonsense carve-out from Section 638.51. Failing to grasp the actual rulings in Bunnell, Capitol Records, and Malibu Media, she mischaracterizes Wolverine's argument as a "fact-based" consent defense prematurely raised at the pleadings stage. Opp. at 13:15–15:19. But Plaintiff's consent (i.e., whether she expressly assented to or impliedly "knows that [Wolverine] has the capacity to monitor the communication") is entirely beside the point. Id. at 14:24-26.

As Bunnell, Capitol Records, and Malibu Media recognized in interpreting the

1 analogous Pen Register Act, a rudimentary understanding of how Internet-based
 2 communications function makes the carve-out for the intended recipient’s collection of IP
 3 addresses indispensable,² since “IP address[es] [are] transmitted as part of the normal
 4 process of connecting one computer to another over the Internet.” Capitol Records, 2009
 5 WL 1664468, at *3. “An internet user creates connection data by ‘making the affirmative
 6 decision to access a website,’ just as the user of a landline generates a telephone-number
 7 record solely by choosing to dial it.” United States v. Soybel, 13 F.4th 584, 593 (7th Cir.
 8 2021) (citation omitted). This conduct is not subject to culpability under Section 638.51.

9 As an even greater red herring, Plaintiff points to California’s Electronic 10 Communications Privacy Act, Cal. Penal Code § 1546 et seq. (“ECPA”) and the California
 11 Privacy Protection Act, Cal. Civil Code § 1798.100 et seq. (“CCPA”) for the “proposition 12 that Californians have a reasonable expectation of privacy in their IP addresses that they 13 use to gain access to the Internet.” Opp. at 15:20–17:7. These statutes are inapposite.
 14 Plaintiff is not bringing claims under the ECPA, CCPA, or for invasion of privacy. Nor 15 could she bring these claims—even after the enactment of ECPA and CCPA, courts
 16 continue to recognize that “there is no legally protected privacy interest in IP addresses.”
 17 Heeger v. Facebook, Inc., 509 F. Supp. 3d 1182, 1189 (N.D. Cal. 2020). Moreover, courts
 18 interpreting Section 638.51 have held that whether individuals have an expectation of 19 privacy in IP addresses “is immaterial” to the “elements of Plaintiff’s claim.” Greenley v.
 20 Kochava, Inc., No. 22-CV-01327-BAS-AHG, 2023 WL 4833466, at *15 (S.D. Cal. July 21 27, 2023). These unrelated statutes have no bearing on the inapplicability of Section 638.51
 22 to the alleged collection of IP addresses at issue here.

23 B. The Alleged Software Is Not A Pen Register Or Trap And Trace Device

24 CIPA’s legislative materials and statutory framework illustrate that Section 638.51
 25

26 ² This exemption is analogous to the “party” exemption under Section 631(a) of the 27 CIPA which, like here, is implicit in the section’s text and inherent to its purpose. Rogers
 28 v. Ulrich, 52 Cal. App. 3d 894, 899 (1975). Under that section, courts have long recognized that the statute does not prohibit a party to a communication from recording it. Graham v.
Noom, Inc., 533 F. Supp. 3d 823, 831 (N.D. Cal. 2021).

1 was never meant to apply to the software allegedly used here. Plaintiff concedes that her
 2 proposed application of 638.51 to software that collects IP addresses is incompatible with 3 the remainder of the statute—specifically, Section 638.52. Opp. at 20. While Plaintiff
 4 attempts to blame this fatal flaw in her reasoning on Legislative oversight, that argument in 5 and of itself is contrary to principles of statutory interpretation: it “encroaches on the 6 legislative power” by “curing a perceived omission or inclusion beyond the bounds 7 permitted by interpretation”—a purely “legislative function” that is outside the purview of 8 this Court. California Corr. Peace Officers Assn. v. Dep’t of Corr., 72 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 9 1340 (1999).

10 “[W]ell-established rules of statutory construction” require that “every statute 11 should be construed with reference to the whole system of law of which it is a part, so that 12 all may be harmonized and have effect,” and separate sections, like Sections 638.51 and 13 638.52 here, “must be read together and so construed as to give effect, when possible, to 14 all the provisions thereof.” Mejia v. Reed, 31 Cal. 4th 657, 663 (2003) (citations omitted).
 15 Applying this principle of statutory interpretation, this District in Application of U.S. of 16 Am. for an Ord. Authorizing Use of a Cellular Tel. Digital Analyzer, 885 F. Supp. 197,
 17 199–200 (C.D. Cal. 1995) relied on this same pre-Patriot Act language still used in Section 18 638.52 to find the federal statute’s language inapplicable to technologies similar to the 19 software alleged here. Id. Like in Digital Analyzer, here too the “construction of” the same
 20 “related sections” of CIPA (Cal. Penal Code § 638.52) evidence a clear legislative intent
 21 to apply only to physical devices capable of recording telephone numbers, not IP addresses.
 22 Id. at 200. A contrary reading would render CIPA a nullity. If Section 638.51 prohibits the 23 collection of IP addresses without a court order, Section 638.52 would create impossible
 24 hurdles to the acquisition of any court order under the statute—because the “identity . . .
 25 of the person . . . in whose name is listed the telephone line,” and the “physical location of 26 the telephone line to which the pen register or trap and trace device is to be attached,” 27 simply do not exist for IP addresses that are automatically sent by website browsers to the 28 operator of a website. See Cal. Penal Code § 638.51(d)(1), (3).

1 The narrow word choice in Section 638.52 enacted in tandem with Section 638.51
 2 reflects a legislative intent to limit “the proscription on pen registers and trap and trace
 3 devices to prohibit only devices that are ‘attached’ to a telephone line; a deliberate choice
 4 that “cannot be assumed to be inadvertent.” Application of U.S. of Am. for an Ord.
 5 Authorizing Use of a Cellular Tel. Digital Analyzer, 885 F. Supp. 197, 199–200 (C.D. Cal.
 6 1995).

7 Indeed, in arguing to the contrary, Plaintiff only cites legislative materials relating to 8 other sections of the CIPA not at issue here (e.g., Opp. at 19:16–20:15 (citing California 9 Senate Bill 1428 (2009-2010 Regular Session))), such as CIPA’s wiretapping provisions.
 10 And her citations to materials from the U.S. Congress concerning the enactment of the 11 Patriot Act’s provisions suggest only that the federal act’s expansion was intended to cover 12 “software” that “collects the same information as a physical device” like call-identifying 13 information, not IP addresses. 147 Cong. Rec. H7159-03, H7165, 2001 WL 1266413 (Oct.
 14 23, 2001). There is no indication the California statute was ever meant to apply to software
 15 capable of collecting IP addresses sent by any device accessing a website. See RJN, Ex.
 16 19 at 10 (“As opposed to a wiretap, a pen register/trap and trace device only records the 17 numbers dialed to or from a particular phone number.” (citing 47 U.S.C. § 18 1002(a)(2)(B), which relates to “call-identifying information,” not IP addresses)).

19 “Finally, the court may consider the impact of an interpretation on public policy, for 20 where uncertainty exists consideration should be given to the consequences that will flow
 21 from a particular interpretation.” Mejia, 2 Cal. App. at 1340 (citations and quotation marks
 22 omitted). In evaluating the legal consequences that flow from two competing 23 interpretations, the California Supreme Court has also provided: “[W]here the language of 24 a statutory provision is susceptible of two constructions, one of which, in application, will 25 render it reasonable, fair and harmonious with its manifest purpose, and another which 26 would be productive of absurd consequences, the former construction will be adopted.” 27 People ex rel. Lungren v. Superior Court, 14 Cal. 4th 294, 305 (1996) (citations and 28 quotation marks omitted).

As explained, supra at § III(A), Plaintiff's interpretation of the statute would create liability every time a visitor connects to a website, a rule that would make operation of any website impossible. Such an "anomalous outcome[]" premised on an "unreasonable, and impossible, interpretation of the statute's reach" should be rejected. ACA International v. FCC, 885 F.3d. 687, at 697 (D.C. Cir. 2018).
